

The world's problems

We have many problems in the world, political, war problems, poorness... In addition, we have problems in our nature. Climate changes are one of the many others. It is not good that we have snow at the end of the February and in the beginning of the March and not in December and January like the one we used to have. Certainly, it was not good in New York, back in 2014 when the snowstorm happened. Days before it had been very warm and many people enjoyed in the warm weather. Maybe if we all changed our lifestyle, we could help. Perhaps we could use solar heating and not chimneys or some other heating based on fossil fuels. We could save money and stop climate changes. However, we also have to protect the Sun; it gives us warmth and light. The Sun used to be healthy for our skin and bones. Over the years, scientists discovered that Sun may not be that healthy for our skin and could give us skin cancer. UV rays are getting through the ozone layer and when the heat in the summer grows, it is not good to be outside of the house, we could get really sick. The holes in the ozone layer are getting bigger as we speak. We should help our nature, because our children, grandchildren will live in this world. Even the Academy award actor Leonardo di Caprio helps with climate changes, he also made a documentary film 'Before the Flood'. He should be a role model for all of us.
